Pear Mrs. Hunter:

Although I have examined
not only yours own, but other papers that have been accepted by certain ancestral societies in Am. Tending to show that Edward Digges of Va was a son of Sir Dudley Diggs (as indeed he probably was) I have not been able to find in any Old World records
any statement showing that Sir Dudley Diggs had such a son. His named sons were Thos, John & Dudley.

The gravestone of Edward Digges lists him as a "Sonne of Sir Dudley Digges of Chelham in Kent," which is pretty good evidence although of course
He did not use that gravestone. It seems to me that there must be in existence somewhere, some documentary evidence (Old world records) to connect Edw Digges to Sir Dudley & I have been unable to find it however.

Mrs Lewis L. Chapman,

Dear Mrs Chapman:

Sorry so long getting these memos to you, but can't get very much done in a lunch hour.

Have been unable, thus far, to find any mention of Edward Digges, Governor &c., son of Sir Dudley, in English publications relating the name of his father, but find his brother Thomas had a son also named Edward.

The enclosed notes may be of interest, Dudley Digges, son of Sir Dudley died in 1643 and his will was probated in P.C.C., London, he may make some mention of his brother Edward - Library and Hist Soc. do not have P.C.C. index for 1638, date of Sir Dudley's death, therefore I do not know whether he left a will.

Sir Dudley is buried at Chilham Church, Kent., and the parish registers there commence in 1558 - why not have the present rector make a search of the register for the birth of Edward, son of Sir Dudley?

Virginia publications say Edward was the fourth son of Sir Dudley, see notes.

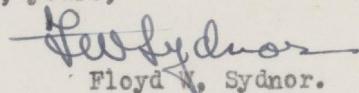

An investigation of the register or copies of the wills of Sir Dudley and/or Dudley (d 1643) seem to be the only way out, provided proof from an English source is required.

Miss Doris E Eldred, 19 Fernleigh Road, Winchmore Hill, London, N. 21, does work there for Mrs Hiden and may copy the wills for you.

Will gladly furnish you names of other investigators in England if desired.

Regret very much I could not be of more assistance.

As ever, yours,

Floyd W. Sydnor.
